

Flash Cards

Link to video on dual coding
INSERT LINK

Example (Link to example HERE)

Learning French Verbs

Front	Back
What is the french verb for 'to have'?	Avoir It is an irregular verb
	J'ai I have
	Tu as You have
	Il as He has
	Elle as She has

What are Flash Cards?

- Flashcards are a study tool that engage what is known as 'active recall', the process of repetitively retrieving information from memory.
- Flashcards should:
 - Have a singular question on the front, with an answer on the back
 - Contain short bursts of information
 - Be made as soon as possible after learning something new.

Pro's and Con's of Flash Cards

Pro's	Con's
<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Portable – allowing you to study on the go• Creating them assists memory consolidation• Encourage self-reflection when you check to see if you had the correct answer• Supports dual coding if you combine pictures with words	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Too much information can overload the card and your working memory, making them ineffective• Can mistakenly be used for summarising, rather than testing• Adding lots of colours and images can make these time-consuming to create